WASHINGTON CITY.

Still Unsettled.

CHICAGO, June 1.—A Times Washington special says the President's third term letter is the main topic in political circles, and there are two very decided opinions on the subject. Friends of the administration say the letter sets at rest forever the third term scare, while on the other hand it is regarded by a large number to mean that Grant is a candidate for the office. The letter has given rise to a good deal of discussion, and from the dissatisfaction expressed over it, it is clear that the President has not settled the question.

C., June 1.—The debt statement shows a reduction during May of $80,000; as follows: Currency, $4,360,000; special deposit of legal tenders for redemption of certificates of deposit, $55,000,000; coin, $4,000,000; including certificates, $20,000,000; outstanding legal tenders, $377,000,000.

Sioux Council at Washington—The Sioux Sell Out for $25,000.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—All the delegations of Indians met at the rooms of the secretary of the interior this morning to have another council. All the agents and interpreters were present. The Indians were gaudily attired and painted. Commissioner Smith told the Indians that, when here last, the secretary made a proposition to them to go to Indian Territory, and asked them to consider the offer of the government of $25,000 to relinquish part of their hunting grounds; also of the desire of the people to go to the Black Hills and the difficulty of preventing them. In regard to going to Indian Territory, they had expressed themselves opposed to it, and unless they had changed their minds there was no use in saying anything more about that. The secretary told them that if they didn't accept the offer of $25,000 in thirty days they might not get it all. In regard to the Black Hills, they had now had plenty of time to think, and it was hoped they could give such definite answers as would make it unnecessary to have further talk on the subject.

Red Cloud said the Great Spirit hear me and have mercy on me and pity me. He called Heaven and earth to witness before he spoke. The President said he made a mistake in telling him when he was here that these arrangements were for thirty days. The President told him, at that time to sell the country for hunting grounds, and he had been sick. The two men by his side came last summer and told him for the first time about the $25,000; and he said wait till I go and see the President and ask if he has got the money. If it is really so, I have children and am not willing to give anything to make them poor. This money will only pay for land to Pawnee Creek. We wish to retain the rest. When he was here four years ago he was shown a large building where all the money is kept, and he thought he had a large amount of money there. He would take this $25,000, but when winter comes he wanted them to try and get more. When he came here before nothing was said about the Indian Territory. Since he has been here this time he had heard but little of the President, and thought it hard that he should be asked to go there to live, and he has said twice he would not go. His country was a good one; he wished to keep it. Did not like having the Nebraska line through his country, and considered it robbery. Last winter, when annuities were due, many of his people were absent and did not get their goods. He wanted more [illegible] and was not satisfied with the food given them. Did not like salt pork, and thought his children had died from eating it. He wanted bacon, rice, hominy and tea sent him; was looking to see his children and tried to do the best for them.

After further talk the Indians agreed to accept $25,000 in consideration of relinquishing a large portion of their hunting ground in Nebraska. The secretary is willing to concede them considerable territory, 10 or 15 miles south of Nebraska river. The treaty was drawn up, but Spotted Tail refused to sign it until they received the $25,000 appropriated for this purpose. It was explained that the money couldn't be obtained till the treaty was signed, and the Indians were given a copy of the treaty to take to their rooms to consider over the matter.

The secretary of the treasury has issued a call for [illegible] five-twenty cent coupon bonds.

French Politics.

PARIS, June 1.—The committee of thirty have completed the examination of the public powers bill, and agreed to report in favor of its passage, with amendments, the most important of which are as follows: That an extraordinary convention of the chambers may be demanded during prorogation, by a third of the members of each house, instead of half, as originally provided; and that war cannot be declared by the executive without the consent of the chambers. The first amendment is opposed by the government.

THE TILTON-BEECHER TRIAL.

NEW YORK, June 1.—Evarts continued his address for defense in the Tilton-Beecher case before a crowded house. He said he had endeavored to lay before the jury the situation of the parties as set forth in their character and relations, which would enable the jury to judge of their movements. He would call attention to the fact that in December, 1870, Beecher referred Bowen to his (Beecher's) wife. There was an aspect attempted to be introduced into this case that there was an attempt on the part of Beecher to preclude all knowledge of his relations with Mrs. Tilton from his wife, but parties on the other side never sought any papers in proof of this assertion, but when Bowen was referred to Mrs. Beecher he was told Mrs. Beecher had the letters of her husband received from Mrs. Tilton while his wife was in Marietta. The jury could have no doubt but that all of Beecher's correspondence was in the hands of his wife. Tilton, in direct examination, denied that there was any separation or incompatibility of views between him and his wife until the final abandoning of her home by Mrs. Tilton. In the light of the evidence what became of this view of plaintiff and of the faith of the jury in the foundation of the case thus laid in falsehood, the evidence was very plain as given by Beecher, supported by Bessie Turner and Bowen and Bell. According to Beecher, there came like a thunderbolt upon him a revelation of cruelty on the part of the wife, and infidelity on the part of the husband. This revelation came from Bessie Turner, and when he was spoken to on the subject he referred them to his wife; and there was the conclusion in which Deacon Bell took part; and then came the slip from Beecher to his wife, when he was busy and could not attend to the matter. In the conversation between Bowen and Beecher was disclosed the whole transaction, and he was referred to Mrs. Beecher as having the largest knowledge of the facts bearing on the subject.

Beecher then took counsel with Bell, one of his parishioners, about the matter, and followed his advice. Beecher stated to him that Mrs. Tilton had left her husband's house and gone to her mother's; that Tilton's licentiousness had been very low and his conduct to Mrs. Tilton been marked with great cruelty; that Mrs. Tilton had sent to consult him and Mrs. Beecher, and thus been brought in the conference. The jury had proof of Tilton's cruelty and profligacy, and that his wife needed protection. Beecher's note to his wife read that he was inclined to think Mrs. Beecher was right, and that separation was best.

Counsel referred to the testimony of Storrs going round to see Moulton in regard to stories being circulated about him. Tilton, in rebuttal, didn't contradict Storrs' story, and did not this lead the jury to believe in Tilton's attempt to beguile and mislead their judgment. Counsel would ask Tilton if, after the interview with Bowen, he didn't go to his house and announce himself as being ruined; at the same time he tries to make it appear he was not ruined, and says he had property to the extent of $20,000. This man swore he was a man of property, gentlemen, to impose on your credulity. All the money he had since 1874 was $4,000; he was crushed so far as pecuniary matters were concerned. After Bowen took the paper to Beecher, which was to drive him out of Brooklyn, Bowen shook his fist in Tilton's face, and said if he ever acknowledged that Bowen had anything to do with this letter, he would cashier him from the Independent.

Evarts referred to the statements in the "True Story" in regard to the enmity to Mrs. Morse and Mrs. Beecher, the latter pronounced by Tilton as his most relentless enemy; she never received any of his confidence; she was never deceived by any dis-resemblance between his face and heart. Storrs was a witness who was a friend to Tilton, and the latter said if he had happened to meet him he should have made him his confidant instead of Moulton. Were this true, what a pity he failed to find a friend who possessed the intelligence and integrity of Storrs. Now the latter testified that on the 2d of January, 1871, Tilton told him his ground of complaint against Beecher was that he, Mrs. Beecher and Mrs. Moulton, had been telling stories against him. The testimony proved these were the cause of Tilton's hatred towards Beecher. When Tilton was recalled, he did not utter a word of denial of this entirely new matter introduced by Storrs. The theory of plaintiff, that it was not until this lofty crown had been taken away, until shrine and sceptre had been plucked away that stories against Tilton had poured in upon Bowen. The proof of these stories he didn't propose to discuss, but Tilton sat up the theory that until his removal they had not been reported to Bowen, and Beecher had no instrumentality in his removal by Bowen. It was pretended by plaintiff that he was wealthy and prosperous until the act of Bowen discharging him; that he pretended it was not until the chimes of St. Ann's were ringing in the year 1871 that he was first aware that any moth had corrupted the garment of his pride.

Evarts said it was when he found his attempt to intimidate Beecher had only completed his own ruin that Tilton determined to resist Beecher by getting around that great generous heart which Tilton testified made Beecher great. Tilton said the way to get at it was to persuade Beecher he had done a man an injury, however slight, and that if other men knew this as well as he did, they would impose upon him more. Evarts spoke of the remorse naturally felt by a man of delicate and noble feelings in believing he had improperly interfered in a household which stood to him in relations of friendship; said he could not sufficiently express his scorn for a disposition which would judge every man by motives which would influence the coarsest and basest natures—men who, he argued, would not only recognize those sentiments which tended to raise the mortal to the skies, but endeavored to establish those who would drag an angel down. Evarts quoted in this connection the lines of Cowper:

> "Oh, why were farmers made so coarse,
> Or parsons made so fine?
> A kick that scarce would move a horse,
> May kill a soul divine."

He quoted a conversation in the "School for Scandal" with regard to the lady whose color came and went at morning and night, and when Moulton was on the stand one could almost see his memory come and go. Tilton was accused of scandalous and immoral conduct during a visit at Winstead, Conn. The report was so strong when the alleged occurrence was fresh as to cause a letter to be written to Tilton about it, and induce him to write a letter in reply. He said the woman in question was merely a little girl, and treated the matter lightly as a scandal growing out of scarcely nothing. It was not desirable by Tilton and Moulton that they be represented as blackmailers, and in compelling Bowen to pay money which he didn't legally owe, by publishing a document which would involve him in the scandal. For this reason it was necessary they represent that the Winsted matter and similar stories were wholly without foundation. The testimony showed this alleged school girl was a matured young lady, and that the circumstances of the affair, as narrated by disinterested witnesses, were such as to justify the report of Tilton's conduct and to justify Bowen's action. In the interview between Tilton and Bowen in which the latter described the horrible scheme and system of profligacy practiced by Beecher from his residence in Indianapolis down to the suggestion made by Tilton that Beecher had made improper proposals to his wife, entirely eclipsed all the rest in Bowen's mind. Bowen had been dealing for years in cloudy calumny, but here was something tangible, something recent, something that people would believe. He urged Tilton not to let this rest but check this career of profligacy at once. Tilton asked why Bowen did not use the terrible facts in his possession, and Bowen said that his honor forbade him, because of a settlement of the difficulties between him and Beecher. Why did not Bowen think of this before he told Tilton all these stories. A letter to Beecher was then prepared, containing a demand for Beecher's retirement from Brooklyn for reasons known to himself. That bold blackmailing letter put Tilton in his power. Beecher received the letter, read it and did not fall down dead. Beecher asked Bowen if he came there as a friend, according to the latter's testimony, and Bowen answered he was not hostile to him. If Beecher had been present at the interview between Tilton and Bowen what would he have thought of Bowen's conduct? These conspirators, Bowen, Tilton and Moulton, when they were together thought no eye saw them, no ear heard their machinations. The jury were men of common sense and were not to discard all reason when they came into the jury box. Did they believe a man, a pastor, moving in the society he did, occupied with Mrs. Tilton relations of a paramour and mistress? Did the jury think this woman would pick a quarrel with her husband and leave his roof when he had condoned the offense and thus made it public? could they imagine a wife so situated could rush out of her house and leave her shame in the hands of her husband? Did they think Beecher would turn this woman over to his wife to apply to her all the examination one woman would apply to another fallen one? If the jury would not take the philosophy and teachings of the Scripture on the subject, let them take the generosity of Beecher's heart.

Court adjourned.

Decision in Supreme Court.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 1.—In the supreme court to-day, Chief Justice Wallace rendered a decision on the application of ex-Harbor-master John J. Marks to be admitted to bail pending the decision in the case on appeal denying the application. The court points out the fact that under the code, bail, pending such an appeal, is not a matter of right but of discretion. The prisoner is protected from the execution of sentence until such an appeal is heard, so that none of his supposed rights are in jeopardy. Probably Marks would have furnished any amount of bail had he been allowed, and it is just as probable he would have left the country without delay. The supreme court is yet to pass on the validity of Marks' conviction, but there does not at present appear to be much of a margin for the accused this side of a term of penal servitude.

[FROM THE JOURNAL.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 1.—The case of John J. Marks came up to-day before the supreme court, on motion to admit the prisoner to bail. After hearing the arguments in the case, Judge Wallace denied the motion and ordered Marks to be remanded, pending trial of case on appeal in July.

In the meeting of the board of supervisors last night, a resolution to purchase the franchises and property of the Alameda Water Company of Calaveras valley, was indefinitely postponed. The question of purchase of Spring Valley Company's works next came up and provoked long and sharp discussion, which ended in passing a resolution to print in order to get the matter properly before the public. During the discussion it was hinted that the Spring Valley Company was master of the situation, having bought up the other companies.

CALIFORNIA AS IT IS.

SOME OF THOSE ZEPHYRS—CROPS OF NORTHERN CALIFORNIA—A NEW INVENTION IN THRESHING MACHINES.

JACINTO, COLUSA CO., CAL., May 26.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

A few words from the tar-headed country. The north wind is blowing a perfect hurricane, the dust intolerable, the gravel cutting one's face like shot. A large two-story frame dwelling has been blown from its foundation and made into kindling wood; no one hurt. The house I am writing in is rocking like a ship at sea.

We have finished haying and have cut some barley. Will commence heading wheat next week. The crops up here are looking much better than I expected to find them upon my return from Oregon, the land of promise. The grain up here in the northern part of the State is nearly an average crop. Some of it, the summer fallow, is equal to that of last year, but the late winter plowing is not so good.

Mr. Kindred Gupton has been building a new threshing machine, "The Gladiator," the largest ever built. The cylinder is only 40 inches, but contains many improvements, the separating power being entirely different from those now in use, and nearly double the size. The greatest difficulty that has always existed, did not exist so much with the threshing as with the separating capacity, and Mr. Gupton has, after years of experiment and deep study, produced a machine that will do an enormous quantity of work, and do it well. It will be run with a 25-horse power engine, and be capable of turning out 4,000 sacks per diem. The machine is simple of construction, yet of great strength and power. Here where farmers have ten or twelve thousand acres of grain to take care of, large machines are absolutely necessary, and neatness and dispatch a consideration. As soon as I am at liberty I will send you a full discription of "The Gladiator," and am fully confident of being able to prove that this great machine is worthy the name it bears.

The busts of John G. Whittier and the late Prof. Agassiz, by Preston Powers, are now on exhibition in Boston. They were modeled by Mr. Powers during his visit to that city last November, and taken to Florence, where they were cut in Carrara marble of spotless whiteness. As portraits they are said to be faithful and characteristic, while in their mechanical execution they are remarkable for elaborate and delicate finish. The busts were cut in marble by the same artisan who reproduced Hiram Powers' Greek Slave, and who is considered the most skillful workman of his class in Florence. The bust of Agassiz is undraped, but that of the Quaker poet represents him in the costume of the religious sect of which he is an active member. The latter was ordered by C. H. Brainard, who intends placing it in the Museum of Fine Arts.

Company H (Trimble's), First Cavalry, will be relieved from duty at Camp Harney, on or about the 15th of June, and will proceed to Fort Walla Walla.

OREGON.

But one license to retail liquors was granted in Salem last month.

Eight marriage licenses were issued by the clerk of Marion county, in May.

Samuel McGee was thrown from a buggy at Salem last Sunday, and knocked senseless for awhile, but soon recuperated.

Fourteen hundred and ninety odd sheep belonging to Martin & Cameron, of Jackson county, sheared recently, yielded 6,000 pounds of wool.

The Salem Record says: "There is not yet much wool being brought in and we understand the granges are looking out to do the best they can for producers in disposing of the Oregon clip. The market has taken no definite shape as yet, but prices rule low.

Quite a number of buyers are in Umatilla county purchasing wethers for the Sound, Portland and Nevada markets. They are paying about two dollars a head for well conditioned wethers. Stock sheep are selling at about $2 50 each. Very few wish to sell.

The Sentinel has been shown some very rich rock that has been found on Rogue river. Gold was plainly visible to the naked eye, and was very plentiful. E. R. Scott, the discoverer, states that the ledge was about a foot wide on the surface where the specimens were taken from, and that by throwing water on the face of them gold could be seen scattered all through them.

A letter from Pendleton to the Record says: "I am now in the heart of a very extensive sheep country. Perhaps the largest sheep owners of Eastern Oregon live in this immediate neighborhood, some having as many as 9,000 or 10,000 head each. They are now shearing their sheep. The wool clip is large, averaging from four pounds to six and seven pounds, according to the condition of the flock and the breed."

The Sentinel says: "We have heard it remarked several times lately that the apple crop throughout Jackson county will be a failure this year, and the blossoms on the trees had all been killed by the frost which occurred during April. We do not know how true this report may be as regards the fruit crop outside of town, but it is now pretty certain that all the trees in Jacksonville that have been in bloom have been killed by the frost."

The Salem Statesman says Thomas Quill and William Neal, of Salem, and Amos Harvey, of Polk county, were arrested last Monday charged with giving liquor to a Chitcoe Indian named John Brown and a Grand Round Indian named John Silas. An examination was held yesterday forenoon before United States Commissioner P. L. Willis, which resulted in the acquittal of Neal and the holding of Harvey and Quill to appear before the grand jury. Being unable to furnish bonds in the sum of $250 each they were committed to jail.

There is within three miles of Jacksonville, says the Sentinel the largest cinnabar ledge that has as yet been discovered, and which is now being thoroughly prospected. A cross cut having been run eight feet in depth and ten feet wide, shows the ledge to be sixty feet wide from casing to casing. They have sunk a shaft in the cross-cut to the depth of thirty-five feet, and the ore looks very fair all the way down, and seems to be of a better quality the farther down they go on the ledge. Messrs. John Bilger, E. D. Foudray, West Manning, T. McKenzie, M. Caton, E. D. Watson, J. H. Penn, J. B. Coates and H. K. Hanna are the names of the gentlemen who compose the company.

The Walla Walla Statesman says: "The respective parties in Oregon in forming their platforms for the special Congressional election, should take a decided stand in relation to opening the Umatilla Reservation. One of the finest bodies of land on the Pacific coast; embracing many thousands of acres not required for Indian purposes, it is absolutely shameful that white men should be denied its use. The few remaining Indians can very readily be distributed between the Simcoe and Warm Springs Reservations. Or, if this be deemed impractical, they can be allotted one-third the land they now hold, and then they will have vastly more land than they can use for a good purpose. The idea that the most desirable lands in the country are to be left barren in order that wild Indians may roam over them in primeval solitude is not to be tolerated, and we trust that all parties when they meet in convention will speak out in condemnation of a policy that pampers the Indian and denies the white man an equal opportunity in the battle of life."

SENSIBLE VIEWS ON THE LABOR QUESTION.

Discussing the great strike of mining operatives in the coal regions of Pennsylvania, the Philadelphia Times makes the following sensible remarks which are applicable to this labor problem everywhere:

While the workmen simply refused to work, they did what they had an entire right to do. A man has no right to be idle and a burden on his fellows without just cause; but he has a right to make the best terms he can for his labor, and in the way that he thinks best, provided he do not interfere with the right of others to make their own bargains as well. But when these men undertake to say, not only that they themselves will remain idle, rather than accept the terms of the employers, but that nobody else shall be allowed to go to work in the mines, they do that which robs them of all claim to public sympathy, and make themselves enemies of the Commonwealth. All that a workman has that is worth having is his power to work and his liberty to use it, and in that liberty he must be protected against every unlawful force, whether in the shape of combinations of capital or of combinations of labor. The State cannot compel him to his duty of earning his living, as long as he has friends or comrades to support him; but the State can and must protect him in his right to earn his living by lawful labor, and it cannot stop to question whether the wages for which he may choose to work are an adequate compensation, or whether they would be acceptable to others. It is enough that the man is peacefully pursuing a lawful calling if he choose to work for a penny a day nobody can interfere, and nobody can be allowed to interfere with him. Nor, as we said at the start, is interference by threats and the power of numbers any more to be tolerated than actual violence, and the men and women in the coal regions, who surround the mines in vociferating crowds and seek to drive away the poor fellows who are trying honestly to put food into their children's mouths, are making themselves justly liable to the severest penalty of the law.

OFF WITH THE BEST MAN.—The Pall Mall Gazette says: "A romance in real life is reported from Halifax, in Yorkshire, namely the elopement of a bride on her wedding day with the gentleman who officiated as 'best man' at the ceremony, and who was, moreover, engaged to be married to her sister. After the marriage had taken place the wedding party adjourned to the house of the bride's mother. One by one they left the room where they were assembled, until the bridegroom found himself sitting alone with his mother-in-law. Some time having elapsed without the reappearance of the bride, and the bridegroom having exhausted his conversational powers, he went in search of her, and was rewarded by finding her in a public house with the 'best man.' The bridegroom himself, being a teetotaler, was given to understand that his presence was de trop in that establishment. This led to an argument, during the course of which the bride and the 'best man' slipped out of the public house, and have not since been heard of. The story, which presents features of unusual interest, is another example, if any were needed, of the existence of some defect in our present matrimonial engagements."

THE TERRITORIES.

The crickets are raiding on the green things in Jordan valley, Idaho.

H. B. Day furnishes beef to the government at Walla Walla for $2 12 per 100 lbs.

The Owyhee Avalanche says: "Preparations for mining operations on a large scale are noted in every direction."

The southern part of Idaho was visited by some cold weather last week, but it is not unusual. Last year, Silver City had a snowstorm on the 28th of June.

Some of the doubting Mormons are asking why Brigham don't get up a revelation that will knock the socks off the coddling moth, which threaten devastation to the apple crop of Utah.

The Walla Walla Spirit of the 28th ult., says: "Some thirty persons were confirmed at the Catholic church on last Sunday by Bishop Blanchet. Last Wednesday, Bishop Morris having arrived, confirmation services were held at the Episcopal church, and six persons admitted to membership."

The Union advocates hop culture in Walla Walla valley, and says: Who will be the first to engage in the business? For whoever he may be he will make money, for there can be as many dollars worth of hops raised on an acre of land as can be realized from a forty acre field of wheat after paying all expenses.

We are in receipt of a letter from "J. B." dated at Cowlitz Prairie, in which the writer says there is plenty of vacant land in that county, embracing river and creek bottom lands; some small prairies of 10 to 100 acres each, east and north of Cowlitz Prairie. A number of farms on the prairie are for sale. Any immigrants, who desire to look at that section, will be welcomed by the settlers, and find good and cheap accommodations while they are looking about for a home.

From all parts of Walla Walla valley there come the most favorable reports with regard to the prospects for abundant crops. The weather has been just the thing for pushing grain ahead, and the harvest will come earlier than usual. But owing to the weather having been quite cool for a good portion of the time, and so much rain having fallen, vegetables and corn have not come on so rapidly as other crops, although they look well and will probably yield better than common, even if they should be a little late in maturing.

CASSIUS M. CLAY.

SOME RECOLLECTIONS OF THE CAREER OF A REMARKABLE MAN.

[From the New York Times.]

Our telegraphic columns will revive memories of thirty years ago in the minds of many of our citizens. Mr. Clay was then—assisted by Frank P. Blair and Gratz Brown, of Missouri—the champion of abolitionism south of Mason and Dixon's line, at a time when the advocacy of that doctrine was not conducive to longevity in the locality named. Mr. Clay, with Mr. Burnham, of Madison county, Ky., voted for Lincoln in 1860. In 1871 he was made a major general of volunteers, but by reason of some difficulty with Mr. Cameron, at that time the Secretary of War, could never get a command in the field.

Some time in 1862 he was sent to St. Petersburg as minister, and while there he was noted for his disregard of the etiquette of that most punctilious court. At the first interview with the Czar he walked into the presence chamber, and after carefully planting a hat of the peculiar Kentucky pattern, not as new as it once was, on the Emperor's private table, sat down to wait further proceedings! Such a thing as anybody sitting down in the presence of the Emperor of all the Russias was unheard of. The Imperial Chamberlain was stupefied, and old Gortschakoff was carried almost fainting from the room. With all his eccentricities and disregard of ceremony, Mr. Clay possessed good, sound common sense, and having as Secretary of Legation his nephew, Mr. Green Clay, of Kentucky, a most accomplished diplomat, the interests of the country were all taken care of.

Mr. Clay has been very much displeased at the course of things, and called upon General Grant lately, "to give him a plain talking to," as he said. He did not meet with the success he had hoped for in his interview with the President, however, and has therefore gone over to the opposition. Although cranky and whimsical in some things, he is a man of the sternest integrity, and unquestioned personal courage, which he has proven on many occasions. But the attack on the rights of the State is a thing no Kentuckian can stand. So, Mr. Clay, with all his hatred of the "villainous slave power," as he used to call it, had to go out of the administration ranks. They have lost a good man.

WOODHULL ON TILTON AND MOULTON.

Mrs. M. H. Burnham writes from New York to the St. Louis Republican: This is a great town and some funny things happening all the time. Less than two months ago, Victoria Woodhull, wearied in body and worn in mind, straitened in circumstances, altogether under a cloud, occupied a very modest suite of apartments in a "flat" house, on Eleventh street. Last evening I found her occupying a stunning brown-stone on Fiftieth street, sitting in a saloon 30 by 75 feet large (the room, not Victoria) surrounded by carved walnut pieces of furniture of the most magnificent description, mirrors of fabulous size, gorgeous carpets, bronze figures the size of life, carved walnut doors, big enough for church purposes, robed in black velvet, sitting in state, refusing Sam Morris' entreaties to take the stand as a witness in this Beecher business. Why, said the astonished woman, "Did Moulton and Tilton actually advise you to take this step?" And when Mr. Morris said they did, she exclaimed that the trial had unsettled their minds, "for," continued Victoria, "proving them false in their statements concerning me would throw out their evidence in all respects. And though Theodore's cause is just and the statements of Tilton, Moulton and wife true in the main, they would be crushed by the foolish prevarication made about me, which I should explode the instant I went on the witness stand." So Mr. Morris, evidently a rapid convert to the Woodhull opinion, withdrew and left the triumphant Victoria to enlarge on this tremendous topic.

VANDERBILT'S FOUR TRACK RAILROAD.—The completion of the four tracks on the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad has already proved the wisdom and foresight of its managers. It is not possible to estimate the capacity of that road for both freight and passenger business; with two tracks devoted exclusively to freight business, and two to passenger traffic, our readers can easily see that it is capable of doing all the business heretofore divided between the Four Trunk lines. The system of signals on that road has been so far perfected that trains can be run within two minutes of each other with perfect safety. Its terminal facilities have been greatly improved. Its rolling stock is the best of any road in the country, and the transportation of over seven millions of passengers in one year, without the loss of a single life by accident, is a record, we believe, no other road can show.—Kansas Democrat and Chronicle.

THE CENTENNIAL BELL.—Meneely & Kimberly, of this city, have a contract for a bell of thirteen thousand pounds (representing the thirteen original States) to be presented the city of Philadelphia by Henry Seybert, a wealthy and patriotic resident of that city. It is designed to place the bell in the tower of Independence Hall. The bell will bear the Bible inscriptions: "Proclaim liberty throughout the land unto all the inhabitants thereof," and "Glory to God in the highest, and upon earth peace, good will toward men." The gift is in honor of the Centennial anniversary, July 4, 1876.—Troy Press.

LETTER FROM CANYON CITY.

VISIT OF SUPERINTENDENT ROWLAND—EDUCATIONAL METHODS AND EXERCISES—FARMING AND MINING NOTES—THE LAWYERS' HARVEST NEARLY RIPE.

CANYON CITY, May 23, 1875.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Prof. L. L. Rowland, State superintendent of public instruction, has been with us at Canyon City, holding a

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE,

For the fifth judicial district, Grant county, Oregon. The professional and ex-professional teachers of the county, together with many friends of education, were in attendance. The exercises were truly interesting and instructive. The first day was devoted to the delivery of an address by the superintendent, and the organization of the Institute. The

EVENING SESSION

Opened with an able address by the professor, upon the different modes of teaching, including the systems practiced from the "old time spelling schools" of 50 years ago, down to the present time. He gave us a graphic description, of the old log school house with its rustic furniture, and contrasted it with the comfortable and well furnished school rooms of the present day. He showed, however, that in many parts of Oregon we are behind "the age of improvement" in this respect, and urged upon all the necessity of a deeper interest in popular education, it being the chief corner stone upon which our national prosperity and happiness depend.

After the superintendent had finished his address a desultory

FREE TALK

Took place, in which teachers, doctors, lawyers and other friends participated. In the language of Col. Curry, it was

AN EXPERIENCE MEETING,

As it consisted principally in teachers giving their experience in teaching, or others relating amusing incidents of their schoolboy days, but wound up with a warm and animated discussion upon the distinctive merits of the "Old Log Schoolhouse" and the costly and finely furnished scholastic institutions of modern times.

The second day was devoted to exemplifying the improved or modern mode of teaching.

THE CANYON CITY SCHOOL

Was called together by its principal, Mr. Olmstead, and subjected to modern drill by the State superintendent. The most amusing exercises were the Missouri or old mode of spelling, the present system of study and what the future will be. The first was demonstrated by the word of command being given, "Study your spelling lessons," at which all the scholars and everybody else joined—not in chorus or harmony, but in loud, sonorous, nasal, gutteral and discordant sounds until they brought down the house on our boisterous Professor. The next example was of the "Modern Whispering School," in which all were allowed to whisper tete-a-tete, or to their books, as the professor styled it. Lastly, the superintendent gave us an example of our schools as they should be; quiet, orderly, systematic and uniform; every scholar respecting the rights of every other and the authority of his teacher.

A COUNTY TEACHER'S INSTITUTE

Was duly organized at the afternoon session, and everything put in working order for a prosperous school year. By unanimous [illegible] of the Institute, the superintendent was requested to deliver a closing address in the evening, upon the subject of education.

Many compliments were tendered the State superintendent while here, for his efficiency and indomitable energy, in our public schools, and in the cause of education generally; and we doubt very much if a better selection could have been made in the State of Oregon than L. L. Rowland, for the office he now fills.

THE FARMERS

Have just finished putting in their spring crops, while the prospect is favorable to a bountiful harvest.

THE FRUIT CROP

Promises to triple that of any former season. Apple, pear, plum and cherry trees old enough to bear, are loaded to their utmost capacity; but peaches are an entire failure, having been killed by the extreme cold weather of last winter. I think that not a peach will be raised in this county the coming season.

THE MINES

Are yielding their usual quantity of gold dust, while water promises to be abundant until late in the season.

THE CINNABAR LEDGE

In John Day valley, gives out flattering prospects, while

THE QUARTZ LODES

Of Middle Fork seem to be increasing in richness as developments progress.

THE CIRCUIT COURT

For the county of Grant, will convene in a few days, and if we may judge by the exhibition of "legal cap" in the hands of the sheriff and his deputies, we will say that it will commence with a full docket.

D. B. RHINEHART.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

ASHLAND, Jackson county, May 28, 1875.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

For the past three nights it has been very cold in this valley, and large quantities of potatoes, corn and garden vegetables lay blackened upon the ground, killed by the frost. Still old settlers will speak slightingly of the Wallamet valley, and tell emigrants the like never was known. I suppose they will say the same next year.

This valley (Rogue river) and the Umpqua can crow over the Wallamet valley in the line of fruit and fruit trees. I never saw orchards look healthier, neater and better than in the two former, and as well set with fruit. Why is the difference? Is the latter losing its supremacy on the fruit question? Is it the fault of the climate, the soil, or the farmer? All along the road there is hardly a neat, healthy looking orchard from Portland to Umpqua. They have a hang-dog, sickly appearance, with dead branches protruding through the tops.

From Portland, this way, the fruit orchards ascend on a graduated scale, but it is not so with the grain and grass crops, only the reverse intensified. With one more shower of rain the Wallamette will produce the heaviest harvest this season that has ever been seen on this coast. In this valley the grain may may look well to those living here, but to one hailing from away down in Webfoot, it looks decidedly short and light complexioned. It produces a smile on the visage of the average Webfoot when he hears the farmer of this valley boast of his country and the grain prospect to the emigrant, when his wheat and oats are heading out scarcely a foot from the ground. There are many emigrants on their way to Webfoot, mostly with large families; one lady said she saw thirty children in one wagon. "How is that for high?" These people here are trying hard to get them to stop, telling them it is sickly, etc., down there, but the late frosts have had quite a cooling effect on their success. Not a day but I am stopped and interviewed on the Webfoot question, and after I have spread myself generally the old lady in the back end of the wagon will ask, "why are you leaving?" This is a puzzler, but I have to answer in some way.

SQUILLS, Sr.

Only six arrests were made by the police of Salem during May. Virtuous city—happy tax payers.

Gen. Custer goes on another expedition to the Black Hills on the 18th of June.

Vested interest—Money in the waistcoat pocket.

FORREST'S LAST APPEARANCE.—His last engagement was at Boston. He had had an attack of pneumonia which affected one of his lungs. Mr. Oakes, his life-long friend, implored him not to go on the stage again. He was ill all the afternoon and so hoarse that he could scarcely speak. The play was Richard. All the entreaties of his physicians and friends could not keep him from the theater. Too feeble to walk, he was led to his dressing-room and arrayed himself for the part. The physician had given Mr. Oakes a small phial of whisky, telling him if Forrest showed signs of suffering to administer it to him. When Forrest heard this he said: "If I die on the stage I will die, but they shan't find any rum in me." A chair was put behind the scenes, and when he was called he was led to it by Mr. Oakes. When his cue came he was raised to his feet. "Steady me," he said, "Steady me and let me go on." Tottering on the stage, the sound of the applause of the multitude seemed to put new life into him, and he went through his part accurately and so to the end of the play. When he finished he was led, half fainting, to his hotel, and he never appeared upon the stage any more. The next night the play was Virginius, but his physicians and friends absolutely forbade his playing his part. He struggled until the last moment, resolved he would not be governed by either friends or physicians. Finally the doctor said, "If you dress for 'Virginius' to-night and go upon the stage you will die." He listened for a moment, burst out into tears like a child, and submitted himself to be put to bed. This was at the Globe Theater, Boston, and he never acted again.—N. Y. Herald.

A PERNICIOUS DISTINCTION

The Pendleton Tribune replies to our remarks with relation to its disclosed intention to support the nominee of the Democratic convention, whether he was a worthy man or not The Tribune admits that its course appears inconsistent at the first blush, but offers an explanation which it hopes will remove all misapprehension of that sort The explanation offered is based upon a theory of the representative character, which we consider wholly inadmissible and pernicious. This theory is that the officer elected ceases to be an individual and becomes merely a representative that the man is merged in the representative and therefore it is not the man we vote for, but the platform of ideas he stands upon This doctrine is proved practically unsound in every office from the highest to the lowest. Men act out themselves in office An honest man makes an honest officer, and a dishonest one makes a dishonest officer and would if every plank in his platform were a reiteration of the duty of public officers to perform their official trusts in perfect integrity A drunken citizen is a drunken officer if he continues to get drunk after his election A corrupt man in office is a corrupt officer, and it makes no difference that his party platform enjoins better things A bigamist is a bigamist still, though a Senator There is no such thing as separating the man from the office If you would have officers that would not degrade and disgrace their offices, select only good men for office There is no other way Everything else is a delusion and a snare An honest man who is dishonest in politics, an honest lawyer who does dishonest things for his client, are impossibilities, because the private and public man can have no separate existences in the same individual The Tribune itself acknowledges the fallacy of its position when, after eulogizing for nearly a column on the distinction it has tried to set up between the individual and the officer, it hedges in this wise

> We are not to be understood by anything we have said above, as in the least favoring immorality or irreligion or as saying that they particularly qualify a politician for his vocation, or as holding forth the idea that an immoral and irreligious politician is more apt to be a good one than one possessed of an opposite character Our rulers should be good men their abilities should be of the highest order their private character should be pure and spotless like that of Washington or Gen Cass or Stonewall Jackson.

Why should our rulers be good, honest, able men and of stainless private character, if the character of the man and that of the office are so entirely distinct that we may vote for the office without voting for the man? We fail to see the reason, assuming the distinction taken by the Tribune to be sound. But since the Tribune asserts that our rulers—by which we take it all public officers are meant—should be men of [illegible] individ[illegible]

[illegible] OF RESPONSIBILITY.

[illegible] argument is as well put by the Lafayette Courier, perhaps, as it could be by anybody It is, that when officers are selected and put into place by a party organization, there is a responsibility beyond that of the individual, the party at large being held responsible for the good conduct of those it elects or appoints to office This is the higher argument, the more common and thoroughly mischievous one being that with the concentration of effort which is secured through party organization, victory is the more readily and certainly won. This argument captures many well-meaning, but thoughtless, persons, who consider only the question of success, overlooking the harm that may be done to society by winning a victory at the sacrifice of principle But the ground urged by the Courier, of party responsibility, is one which, if the premises are true, should have great weight Whatever has the effect to fix and extend the responsibility for official misconduct is certainly to be regarded as worthy of trial. But has the party machinery that effect? We aver that it has not How has the supposed responsibility been enforced hitherto against the parties? The party may elevate to office a man who the next month after his induction, commits the most flagrant corruptions, and all that is necessary to avoid all responsibility for his conduct, is for the party to repudiate the man whenever his conduct becomes so indecent as to shock the community This has been repeatedly exemplified in the history of both parties The corruptions of certain candidates of the Democratic party in this State in 1870, were notorious, but has the party been in any practical way held responsible? Has the Republican party been held responsible in any effective way for the frauds of its officials? Will the Administration be held responsible for the whisky frauds? No, The corrupt officials, when they are found out, and then the party will be praised for beheading the swindlers, but will not be held responsible for the appointment of such men A responsibility that goes no deeper than this indirect party method, is utterly inadequate to the purposes for which political responsibility is desirable. The only responsibility that is worth considering is individual responsibility Let the candidate run on his own personal merits and qualifications and then hold him responsible politically, socially and, if possible, legally for every case of misfeasance This is the only responsibility that can be enforced

THE THIRD TERM QUESTION STILL OPEN

There appears to be some difference of opinion at the East with relation to the interpretation of President Grant's third term letter Some think it is intended as a declaration that he is a candidate, while others think it simply an ambiguous and unfortunate way of saying he is not in the field It may be that the writer of this letter does not know how to say he is not a candidate without prefacing the statement with an argument to show that the objections urged against his candidacy are unfounded and ending with a reservation to the effect that if he should run for the office it would be under the prompting of a sense of public duty and not of personal ambition All this is scientifically possible to a human being But giving the President credit for an average amount of common sense and some observation we cannot think his letter justifies us in setting him down for the anomalous being which the application of that hypothesis to the interpretation of his letter would imply Other people employ just such language as he has used when they wish to convey the idea that they will not push themselves forward, but want it understood they are 'open to conviction' If the Republicans wish to escape the odium of this third term scheme, they must lose no opportunity to declare against it in their conventions for the public mind will never consider this letter a disavowal by the President of any aspirations for the election That may be taken for certain

THE CLOVEN FOOT

It appears there is a fatal perversity in the Democratic party After all their loud declamation about purity and honesty, they show the cloven foot at every opportunity—at every temptation, to say the least In New Hampshire they have just been engaged in one of the most disreputable tricks that has ever been attempted by any party In order to give their party control of the state senate they resort to a piece of rascality that should make every American blush for free government The New York Tribune administers a just rebuke to their shameful proceeding in connection with a clear statement of the facts in the case as follows

> Now comes an opportunity for the Democrats to indulge in petty trickery and to undertake by overreaching and cheating—just the offenses which they have denounced their opponents for and on the stump and in their newspapers howled themselves red in the face over—to defeat the plain and unmistakable will of the people The governor—Weston—and the council—four Democrats and one Republican—are the canvassers of the votes for senators In order to give the Democrats a majority in the senate the governor and council have deliberately thrown out 3,700 votes cast for Nat Head in the second district upon the ground that the candidate's true name is Nathaniel Head—and all the votes cast for the Prohibition candidate in the fourth district, on the ground that he was ineligible not having resided in the State seven years This gives the Democrats a majority of two in the senate and the organization of the body
> This is the briefest statement of the case There are charges of unfairness and double dealing against Gov Weston who it is said agreed to have the matter referred to the supreme court for decision and did not fulfill his agreement But there is enough in this simple statement of the facts to show the disposition by which these leading and representative men of their party were [illegible] ought to be plain enough [illegible] New Hampshire Dem[illegible] there is no adv[illegible] or sha[illegible] [illegible] the will of [illegible] Natt Head [illegible] by any such game but [illegible] thousands of others who may have been [illegible] into voting the Democratic ticket in order to rebuke Republican trickery and dishonesty will turn away from Democracy and all its works with loathing and disgust That kind of pettifogging is bad enough when it has some reasonable chance for success, and is undertaken with a view of procuring some real advantage but when as in this instance it seems to be inspired by nothing but intrinsic dishonesty and absolute inability to do right when there is an opportunity to do wrong it rises to the dignity—if we may be allowed the paradox—of total depravity

PRESIDENTIAL PARDONS

A growing abuse in State and national administration is the indiscriminate exercise of the pardoning power It is gratifying to see that the first order issued from the Department of Justice after the coming in of Judge Pierrepont, is directed at that abuse Following is the order referred to

> DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE
> WASHINGTON, May 17 1875
>
> To the end that pardons may not be granted unadvisedly and against the best interests of good government all applications for executive clemency through this department must be made hereafter upon the sworn petition of some credible person stating as nearly as may be the age nativity and prior occupation of the party imprisoned stating also the name of the judge who presided at the trial, and the name of the district attorney who conducted the prosecution and whether the applicant for pardon has ever before been convicted of crime The petition and all letters in support thereof must state explicitly the reasons why the executive clemency is invoked to abrogate or change the sentence of the court and no motives urged upon this department will be considered unless the same are stated in writing signed by the parties urging them and filed for permanent record and publicity in case the pardon is granted The application must be accompanied by evidence that notice of the petition and of all supporting documents has been served upon the judge who presided at the trial and upon the district attorney of the district wherein the trial was had when such service of notice is practicable at least ten days before the petition is presented to the President It shall be the duty of the district attorney whenever any application shall be referred to him for a report to ask the judge who pronounced sentence for his opinion upon the merits of the application and to have the answer of the judge accompany the report of the district attorney whenever such answer can be obtained The various district attorneys of the United States will take notice of this order
>
> EDWARDS PIERREPONT,
> Attorney General

In the Walla Walla Spirit we find this

> We are glad to learn that Mr Thomas H Brents who some time ago in consequence of a personal affair between himself and Judge Lewis was disbarred from practicing in chambers, has been fully restored to all his legal prerogatives by His Honor Judge Wingard

On the facts as published in the newspapers at the time of the affair between Mr Brents and Judge Lewis the action of the Judge in suspending Brents from practicing before his court at chambers was a palpable abuse of judicial power and a manifest oppression. For that reason as well as because we know Mr Brents to be an honorable man and conscientious attorney, we are gratified to witness his vindication

In this paper we publish a letter from Colusa county California showing the state of that climate The crops are better than had been anticipated but the north wind set everything going That is the wind that Californians dread It is not a cold wind like the north wind in other regions but a hot wind that withers and burns whatever it touches It is the wind that bodes starvation of flocks and herds in the fall

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 2 1875

CITY.

BODY FOUND.—Mr Preston Thomas who lives on the mountain one mile and a half north of the Springville road went out to chop some wood in the timber near his house a few days ago. In the evening he did not return, which caused some uneasiness among his friends. Early on the morning of the following day, as Thomas did not put in an appearance, several of his neighbors turned out to search for him. After a long search the lifeless form of Thomas was discovered lying on the ground with his ax near by. Leaving the body just where it was found the men came to the city and informed the coroner of the fact. Deceased it is said, was subject to epileptic fits and it is supposed he died from the effects of one.

LATER.—Since the above was put in type we learn the following additional facts The dead body was found about 10 miles from town. Coroner Wetmore was notified yesterday morning and proceeded without delay to the scene. He found that Thomas had fallen down a precipice while he was engaged in carrying a piece of timber Evidently a fit had suddenly seized him and he toppled over and in the descent a sapling caught under his neck, which produced death from strangulation before he could recover from the fit. An inquest was held over the remains and the following verdict rendered

We the undersigned jurors, summoned and sworn by J. A. Wetmore, coroner of Multnomah county, to inquire into the cause of the death of a body lying before us near his own house, being about 10 miles northwest of Portland, in said county, this 1st day of June 1875, find that his name was Preston Thomas aged about 40 years, that he was a native of ..., and that he had lived in this county 6 years, that we find no marks of violence upon the body; that he came to his death by the effects of a fit, according to the testimony of the witnesses examined

Deceased leaves a wife and four children in destitute circumstances. Coroner Wetmore ordered a coffin and had the remains buried at the expense of the county

WESTWARD BOUND.—Under the head of "Off for the Willamette Valley," we find the following paragraph in the Holt county Sentinel published at Oregon, Mo., of May 14th: Mr G. M. Slaughter of Johnstun & Meyer's drugstore, Craig, was in town on Wednesday and favored us with a call. He informs us that a caravan of fifteen wagons, which had congregated in the neighborhood of Allen Perkins' sawmill in this county, started for the Willamette Valley on the 19th, each wagon being well filled with people bedding, provisions etc. The teams consist of horses and mules, in first-rate condition and the party intend to cross the river at Plattsmouth, Nebraska. Among the number we notice the familiar names from this county Alex. Boyles, wife and family, Z. T. But... wife and two children Charles Towner wife and two children Garrett Langdon wife and two children Mr Cheney and wife, John Long and family, and a number of others whose names Mr Slaughter failed to get. There were upward of thirty persons in the party. Besides the teams, there was no loose stock taken."

CONTRACTS AWARDED.—The following contracts have been awarded by the quartermaster's department For the supply of Fort Stevens with soft wood, Theodore Hatten, $2 80 per cord. For Fort Colville, Joseph Oppenheimer—oats, 1¾@1¾ cents per pound, hay, $11 50 and $15 per ton, straw, $7 42 per ton; wood, Tenwich & Monagan $2 65 per cord. Contracts have been awarded by the commissary department as follow for supplying the different posts in the department of the Columbia with beef: Camp Harney, M. McCoy, 7½ cents per pound, Fort Colville, J. Oppenheimer, 6½ cents per pound, Fort Klamath, James H. Callahan 8½ cents per pound, Fort Lapwai, G. J. Coburn, 8½ cents per pound; Fort Boise, H. C. Branslett, 6 cents per pound; Fort Walla Walla, H. RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.—Prof. W. W. Freeman and wife, while out buggy riding last evening, met with a severe accident. Mr Freeman had just driven up Salmon street to the corner of Fifth and turned down the last mentioned thoroughfare, when the animal took fright and ran away. The scared horse ran down Fifth street at a furious rate and notwithstanding the efforts of Mr Freeman, its career could not be checked. Coming to the intersection of Taylor street the animal suddenly turned the corner precipitating Mr and Mrs Freeman violently to the ground. The frightened animal then continued on in its impetuous course down Taylor street to Third, when it was stopped. Only a few straps of the harness were broken the buggy escaping without damage. Mrs Freeman was severely bruised and stunned by the fall, and her husband had one ... considerably sprained.

RED MEN, YOUR ATTENTION.—As the public are well aware, the day announced for the Firemen's Picnic is next Saturday, June 5th which time is rapidly moving apace. But little time now intervenes between the present and when the long talked of event of the season, in the picnic line, will transpire. All the necessary arrangements have not yet been perfected for the picnic, and it is desired to perfect the same at the earliest practicable day. There will be a meeting of all the committees to-day at 12 o'clock at the OREGONIAN office. It is needless to add that a full representation is expected as important business will come before the meeting. Remember at 12 M., sharp.

FITTING TESTIMONIAL.—We understand that a number of the leading farmers of Washington county propose to present Mr Wm Watson, who for the last two years has had charge of the Reedville Farm, with some fitting testimonial prior to his departure from the State. Mr Watson will leave for California on the steamer John L. Stephens and does not expect to return to the State. We are not apprised at present of what the testimonial will consist, but feel perfectly warranted in saying that the present will be both handsome and substantial. The presentation will probably take place to-morrow evening, at Hillsboro.

ACCIDENTAL SHOT.—The evening contemporary says: Yesterday quite an accident occurred in the county court-room, which might have resulted in serious damage. A certain county official, having in his hand a loaded breech-loader, the property of the late J. D. ..., carelessly drew back the hammer and succeeding in cocking it the weapon was discharged, the shot coming within a few feet of a young gentleman who was seated near by.

THE LINGARDS.—These popular and highly talented artists concluded a one week's engagement last Saturday at the California theater. The steamer brought a considerable amount of printing which will be displayed at an early day. The troupe are expected to sail from San Francisco for Portland on the steamer which leaves Saturday 12th inst. The new season will open about the 17th inst.

RECEPTION PARTY.—A reception party was held last evening at the First Congregational church by the numerous friends of the pastor Rev. J. D. Eaton and his young wife. The affair was numerously attended and most thoroughly enjoyable in all respects. Refreshments were served in abundance and the evening diversified with music and social converse.

BAPTIST SOCIABLE.—The ladies of the Baptist church desire to express their thanks to Mr D. A. Steel for his kindness in providing a fine piano for their entertainment, free of charge. Also to those who by their presence and patronage, made the entertainment a success both socially and financially.

THE SAN FRANCISCO MAILS.—The stages on the mail route between Roseburg and Redding will run on summer schedule time from and after to-day, reducing the time between Portland and Sacramento to about three and a half days.

FOR VICTORIA.—Mrs Phelps returned yesterday from Vancouver, where she performed two nights. This morning she starts for Victoria with her troupe where she expects to play for a few nights. She will return to this city on the 12th inst.

ROAD TAX LISTS.—For some weeks past the county clerk has been engaged in making out tax lists for the various road districts in the county. These rolls have all been completed and placed in the hands of the supervisors for collection.

Some of our young ladies who are inveterate gum chewers will be interested in knowing that the genuine free gum has all gone out of the market. It is now manufactured from old and unserviceable India rubber over shoes, which are cut up and boiled down with some foreign substances made into sticks and sold at the rate of a half dozen for 25 cents. It might be well enough to remember this.

MILITARY NOTES.

The action of the commanding officer, Fort Canby, Cape Hancock, the 28th inst., detailing Second Lieut. Joshua L. Knapp, 4th artillery, casually at that post, as member of a garrison court martial is confirmed.

In addition to the duties assigned him in paragraph 3, special orders No 63, current series, Captain Edwin V. Sumner, 1st cavalry, will make a thorough inspection of the military posts of Sitka and Fort Wrangel, Alaska Territory.

Upon the return of Assistant Surgeon Brooke to that post or the assignment of another medical officer to duty there Assistant Surgeon Knickerbocker will rejoin his proper station.

PICNICS.

Notwithstanding the frowns of the weather clerk the Red Men have determined to hold their oft-postponed and long deferred picnic and excursion to-day. The probable disagreeableness of the weather will doubtless prove a drawback but the members of the order have been indefatigable in their efforts to render the affair in all respects successful. Ample arrangements have been made for the comfort convenience and pleasure of those who attend. The fine steamer Isaac Stewart has been chartered for the occasion, also the large and commodious barge Autocrat. The latter craft will afford ample accommodations for dancing being over 100 feet long and 40 feet wide, and covered so as to protect persons from either sun or rain. Inclement weather will not in the least degree interfere with the pleasure or personal convenience of the dancers. Excellent music has been provided and an abundance of refreshments. Should the day prove fine the excursionists will be landed at the grounds which have heretofore been selected and the original programme as published carried out to the letter. If the weather is unpropitious the steamer will proceed down the Columbia, and visiting one or more of the fisheries return to the city. This will afford the excursionists abundant opportunity for dancing and the pleasure of an extended trip along the lordly Columbia. One and all should not fail to attend the picnic to-day which, under even the most unfavorable circumstances promises to be one of the affairs of the present season. Promptly at 9 o'clock this morning the steamer will leave the O. S. N. Co.'s wharf so pack your lunches snugly away in your picnic baskets and go.

BALL AND BAT.

Eastern games for the championship: May 19th—Boston 1, Hartford 2. Philadelphia 7, Centennial 4. May 20th—Boston 5, Philadelphia 7; Hartford 10, Atlantic 1. Athletic 12, New Haven 5.

As the Salem boys are warmed up to activity on the ball field by liberal inducements in the shape of prizes why don't some admirer of the national game in this vicinity do the same for our local clubs.

The first series of games between the Atlantics of this city and the Alerts of Milwaukie was played at the latter place on May 9th. At the close of the ninth inning the score stood Atlantics 30 Alerts 19.

Our correspondent at Salem under the head of base ball says: Base ballists are excited over the proposed match game between the Aldines and College Clubs on Friday next. The Aldines will put the following nine into the field: F. L. Wortman c and captain, Frank McCully p, John Riggs s s, A. N. Moores 1st b, L. D. Crandall 2d b, W. D. Fenton 3d b, M. G. Royal l f, Al Peebles c f, Pierce Parker r f. The College nine are not yet selected, although it will undoubtedly be a strong one and as both clubs will play for blood, a rattling game is expected.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

Note reduction in fares over the river route N. P. R. R. and P. S. S. N. Co. Cheap enough for all to take a trip to Victoria.

By all means read the ad of Thompson's two-bit house. It takes Thompson to get up something novel and he keeps it going right long, having great faith in printer's ink.

THE TURF.

Mr George Coggan the well known sportsman states that under the new rules adopted by the proprietors of the new race track at Walla Walla Osceola will not put in an appearance at the July races to be held over that race course.

The La Grande Sentinel of 29 inst. in speaking of sporting matters says: This is a good time for races in this climate, the weather is always pleasant and if any owners of fast horses desire to contend for a purse of $500 with $250 or $500 entrance money to go with the purse and the assurance that they can invest all the spare change they may bring in the pools on their favorite all they have got to do is to signify their willingness to do so by dropping a letter to this office. Osceola, Jessie Trifle, Lindsey, Tom Merry, Rudolph or any other horse can have an opportunity to carry off a handsome fortune. Our idea would be that a race of three in five would be best calculated to suit most horses. We have the assurance of Mr. Coggan that Osceola will be ready for the contest and as Foster's owners have frequently expressed a determination to vanquish the present chief we hope they will make their averments good by coming to the center. In case a contest can be arranged between those claiming to be first class horses other purses will be offered for trotters and horses of less powers of endurance.

PERSONAL.

General Howard and staff departed on the steamer California last evening on an official visit to Sitka. The party will be absent about one month.

A CENTENNIAL CURIOSITY

[From the St Louis Trade Journal]

We were shown a few days ago something which in view of the approaching centennial celebration is of more than ordinary interest. We refer to six pieces of continental scrip some of the first issued by the Continental Congress. This curiosity now becoming quite a rarity is the property of a gentleman residing in this city and has been in possession of the various members of his family for nearly a hundred years. For the purpose of preservation the money was, a number of years ago, framed in a walnut case and covered with glass. It has been very kindly loaned us by the owner and can for the present be seen by any one calling at this office. The bills are of the denomination of two, three, four, five, six and seven dollars and are each numbered 1237. They cannot be said to be of very attractive appearance to the eye, being printed on a very ordinary quality of manila colored paper such as is in this day used for cheap wrapping purposes. Each bill measures 2¾ by 3½ inches in size and the conglomeration of type and general arrangement would probably fill with disgust the mind of a modern bank note engraver. The mottoes graven upon the vignette on the face of each bill would seem to offer a very distinct reflex of what was probably in the minds of our ancestral rebels when they undertook the task of throwing off the fetters of the Mother Country. The six bills bear respectively in order the following mottoes: "Tribulatio ditat," "Lutus in dubiis est," "Aut mors aut vita decora," "Serenabit," "Perseverando," "Sustine vel abstine." That the founders of the financial system of the United Colonies viewed an exclusive paper currency in a somewhat different light from the congressional leaders of the present day may be inferred from the wording of their promises to pay: "This bill entitles the bearer to receive ... Spanish milled dollars or the value thereof in gold or silver according to a resolution passed at Philadelphia November 29 1775." Each bill is signed by Max Lewis and Thos Morris. The reverse of each shows a fancy border encircling a very poor imitation of a leaf and at the base the words "Philadelphia. Printed by Hall & Sellers 1775."

POMOLOGY

It is the purpose of the Centennial Commission of the International Exhibition and an especial object of interest to the Bureau of Agriculture, which has been charged with the reception of fruits for exhibition to afford every inducement and facility for a full and complete display of the fruits of our varied climates and also those of more northern and tropical regions.

It being questionable as to the practicability of exhibiting many perishable fruits the products of the tropics, models in wax and plaster will be acceptable.

Such a display of Pomological products as herein designated will it is expected cover the entire period during which the exhibition will be open, though at all times varying in importance and extent. For instance berries and other small fruits will be included in this department, and of these there will be certain classes as strawberries from the South ready for exhibition on the opening day and the variety and quantity will be presented in an increasing scale as the season advances.

It will be perceived readily that the most important display will be made during the months of September and October.

The classification and arrangement of location of fruits sent for exhibition will be according to their species and variety, all of similar character being assembled together that a more satisfactory conclusion may be reached as to the respective merits of like products from different soils and States; thus all grapes from whatever source will be placed in one position, the same with apples, pears and the entire list of cultivated and wild fruits and nuts.

Exhibitors may be assured that the proper arrangements will be made for the united interests of themselves, and pomological science.

It is hoped that the Promological Societies of the several States and individual cultivators generally will co-operate in an effort to place before the world creditable evidence of the resources and capacity of our country in respect to fruit culture and products.

The Exhibition will open in Philadelphia on the 10th of May 1876 and close the 10th day of November following.

The Postoffice has not been removed yet nor has that bridge across the Wallamet come to the surface but it is a positive fact that BECK & WALDMAN have the largest and best assortment of Spring and Summer Clothing which they are offering to the public at exceedingly low prices. They continue to keep a full line of Youth's Clothing and parents should bear this in mind when they desire to treat their darling boy to a new suit.

At The GREAT EASTERN CLOTHING STORE they are offering the finest Clothing to be found in the city at prices that defy competition. There you can select from the latest styles which are laid in upon the arrival of every steamer from San Francisco. A full line of Furnishing Goods, Youths Suits, Valises and Trunks constantly on hand. Observe the sign "Great Eastern Clothing Store." W. HARRIS, Proprietor, 125 First street.

The pleasant expression on the faces of those making their exit from the Clothing Establishment of JOS KOHN opposite the National Bank is an indication that they have been treated well by the proprietor. Kohn knows what his customers want and he invariably makes it a point to fill the bill. His stock of Clothing, Furnishing Goods etc is complete and the prices are regulated to suit all classes.

PRUNES.

[From the Salem Record]

Mr Editor: At your request I send you a communication on prunes. My first thought was to write briefly on our leading fruits—prunes of course included. But that would require too much time and space for one article, and I have concluded to write now of prunes only and send you it. May be for subsequent numbers a short communication or two on other fruits. I write less for the information I expect to impart than for the inquiry which I desire to excite. The prune fever is so worked up that it is not necessary to write for the purpose of urging the importance of their cultivation. Neither is their success a question. The varieties most worthy of our attention is the chief question for consideration. So far as I am informed we know nothing or little at least practically here of varieties except the Italian and the German. The writer put out a small number of trees in the spring of 186- of the varieties above named. They were very small yearlings at the time of transplanting. In 1873 (6 years out) they bore an average of 200 pounds or more; last year the crop was nearly equal to that of the preceding year. This year they are not so full as a consequence the fruit will be larger and the trees being larger I think the crop will not fall materially short of the preceding years. These trees have been cultivated all the time much as a good farmer in the Western States cultivates his corn. These varieties though quite unlike in tree and fruit have some good points in common. We have some kinds of plums which so overbear as to render their fruit at times, quite insipid—not so with these plums. They have the capacity to sustain and thoroughly mature a large amount of fruits yet by no means all that sets on the trees in a favorable season. My trees were so excessively full in 1873 that a large number of prunes fell. A gentleman looking at them made this an objection and asked the reason. For the same reason I said that you, if you now had twice as much load on your shoulders as you could sustain, you would drop half of it as quickly as possible. These trees thus exhibit a valuable capacity of adaptation to the demands of nature. The prunes begin to ripen about the last of August. You can have a month nearly for the purpose of drying or marketing. Indeed some of them will remain sound on the trees until winter sets in. Their habit is such that you can, without trouble, have them fresh for a least two months. They are both good growers. The German prune is rather erect and has much the appearance of a seedling. The Italian is of courser growth with a large spreading top which keeps close to the ground. Both prunes are covered with a handsome rich bloom and are of good quality. The Italian is the larger and I think the richer of the two. It is hardy and a good bearer, but the German is probably its superior in both of these respects.

Now Mr Editor it is highly important to Oregon and adjacent country that no great mistake be made in this prune business. I am a nurseryman and not a fruit grower to any great extent. I, as other nurserymen, am raising as many prune trees as I can. I have stock upon which I can raise 100,000 or more another year, if I desire. It is probably not extravagant to calculate that the people of Oregon and adjacent Territories during the next two years, will invest several hundred thousand dollars in prune trees. Hence the importance of the earliest and most reliable information possible to guide us on this question.

The Italian and German are now our leading prunes, the Italian standing first in public estimation. If these are soon to be superseded by better varieties or if others considerably better are soon to be introduced, it will prove a grand mistake for producers to invest as extensively in these as now appears probable. For my part, I am disposed to go a little "slow" in the use of new varieties. The Fellenberg and Petit Prune d'Agen are highly spoken of and are perhaps likely to become early and prominent rivals of the Italian and German. One gentleman who has recently had favorable and extended opportunities for observation, writes me that he thinks the Fellenberg and Italian are the same—I am of the opinion, however that he is mistaken. Will not some one who knows speak out? Of course the budding and grafting for this season is done. If any mistake has been made as to varieties it cannot now be repaired but, the early dissemination of information might be of great benefit for the ensuing year. There are parties who I am told will be prepared this summer and fall to furnish buds and grafts of the leading new varieties. That is all right for an enlarged variety is desirable if all are not of equal excellence. For this reason I should like to cultivate some of the new kinds but am not inclined to prefer them to the old which I know to be good for any reason short of the most thorough evidence of their superiority. Let us have light.

THE POETRY OF ARITHMETIC

BY HENRY W LONGFELLOW

I was thinking to-day said Mr Churchill, as he took some papers from a drawer, scented with a quince and arranged them on the study table, while his wife, as usual seated herself opposite to him, with her work in her hand I was thinking to-day how dull and prosaic the study of mathematics is made in our school books as if the grand science of numbers had been discovered and perfected merely to further the purpose of trade

For my part,' answered his wife I do not see how you make mathematics poetical There is no poetry in them

"Ah, that is a very great mistake! There is something divine in the science of numbers Like God it holds the sea in the hollow of his hand It measures the earth it weighs the stars it illumines the universe it is law it is order it is beauty And yet we imagine—that is most of us—that its highest end and culminating point is book keeping by double entry It is our way of teaching it that makes it so prosaic.'

So saying he arose and went to one of his book cases from the shelf of which he took down a little quarto volume and laid it upon the table

'Now here ' he continued is a book of mathematics of quite a different stamp from ours.'

"It looks very old. What is it?"

'It is the Lilawati of Baschara Acharya translated from the Sanscrit

It is a pretty name Pray, what does it mean?"

"Lilawati was the name of Baschara's daughter, and the book was written to perpetuate it Here is an account of the whole matter' He then opened the volume and read as follows

It is said that the composing of Lilawati was occasioned by the following circumstance Lilawati was the name of the author's daughter, concerning whom, it appeared from the qualities of the Ascendant at her birth that she was destined to pass her life unmarried and to remain without children The father ascertained a lucky hour for contracting her in marriage, that she might be firmly connected and have children

It is said that when the hour approached he brought his daughter and his intended son near him He left the hour cup on the vessel of water and kept in attendance a time-knowing astrologer in order that when the cup should subside in the water these two precious jewels should be united

But as the intended arrangement was not according to destiny, it happened that the girl, from a curiosity natural to children looked into the cup to observe the water coming in at the hole, when by chance a pearl separated from her bridal dress and fell into the cup and rolling down to the hole, stopped the influx of the water So the astrologer waited in expectation of the promised hour

When the operation of the cup had thus been delayed beyond all moderate time, the father was in consternation and examining he found that a small pearl had stopped the course of the water and the long expected hour had passed In short the father, thus disappointed, said to his unfortunate daughter, I will write a book of your name which shall remain to the latest times—for a good name is a second life, and the ground work of eternal existence"

As the schoolmaster read, the eyes of his wife dilated and grew tender, and she said

"What a beautiful story When did it happen?'

Seven hundred years ago, among the Hindoos"

'Why not write a poem about it?'

'Because it is already a poem of itself—one of those things of which the simplest statement is the best, and which lose by embellishment The old Hindoo legend brown with age, would not please me so well if decked in gay colors, and hung round with the tinkling bells of rhyme "Now hear how the book begins Again he read,

Salutation to the elephant-headed being who infuses joy into the minds of worshippers, who delivers from every difficulty those that call upon him, and whose feet are reverenced by the gods! Reverence to Ganesa, who is as beautiful as the pure purple lotos and around whose neck the black curling snake winds itself in playful folds!

'That sounds rather mystical,' said his wife

'Yes the book begins with a salutation to the Hindoo deities, as the old Spanish Chronicles begin in the name of God and the Holy Virgin And now see how poetical some of the examples are.' He then turned over the leaves slowly, and read

One third of a beautiful collection of water lilies is offered to Mahadev one fifth to Huri, one-sixth to the Sun one fourth to Devi and six which remain are presented to the spiritual teacher Required the whole number of water lilies

"That is very pretty" said the wife and would put it into the boys heads to bring you pond lilies,'

Here is a prettier one still

One-fifth of a hive of bees flew to the Kadamba flower, one-third flew to the Silandhara, three times the difference between these two numbers flew to an arbor, and one bee continued flying about attracted by the fragrant Ketaki and the Malati What was the number of the bees?

I am sure I should never be able to tell

Ten times the square root of a flock of geese—Here Mr Churchill laughed aloud but he continued, very gravely

Ten times the square root of a flock of geese, seeing the clouds collect, flew to the manus lake; one-eighth of the whole, flew from the edge of the water amongst a multitude of water lilies, and three couple were observed playing in the water Tell me my young girl with beautiful locks what was the whole number of geese?

Well what was it? — What should you think?'— About twenty '— No, one hundred and forty-four. Now, try another

The square root of half a number of bees, and also eight-ninths of the whole, alighted on the jasmines, and a female bee buzzed responsive to the male inclosed at night in a water lily. O beautiful damsel tell me the number of bees

"That is not there. You made it

No indeed, I did not I wish I had made it Look and see!' He showed her the book and she read it herself He, then proposed some of the geometrical questions

In the lake the bud of a water lily was observed one span above the water and when moved by the gentle breeze, it sunk in the water at two cubits' distance Required the depth of the water

That is charming' but must be very difficult I could not answer it'

A tree one hundred cubits high is distant from a well two-hundred cubits from this tree one monkey descends and goes to the well another monkey takes a leap upward and then descends by hypothenuse, and both pass over an equal space Required the height of the leap

I do not believe you can answer that question yourself, without looking in the book said the laughing wife laying her hand over the solution 'Try it

With great pleasure, my dear child, cried the confident schoolmaster taking a pencil and paper After making a few figures and calculations, he answered

There, my young girl with beautiful locks there is the answer—forty cubits'

His wife removed her hand from the book and then clapping both in triumph, she exclaimed No you are wrong you are wrong my beautiful youth with a bee in your bonnet It is fifty cubits!

'Then I must have made some mistake

'Of course you did Your monkey did not jump high enough'

She signalized his mortifying defeat as if it it had been a victory by showering kisses like roses, upon his forehead and cheeks as he passed beneath the triumphant archway of her arms, trying in vain to articulate

"My dearest Lilawati, what is the whole number of geese?

The hull of the old steamboat Shoshone snagged about five months ago just below Salem, is breaking to pieces

It cannot be said that monetary matters have been very active this season so far but the condition at present is one of a fair degree of ease and of encouragement for future trade operations The close of the harvest year is now almost at hand and though the surplus wheat crop has not so nearly all been moved this year as last all other products for export have been in such demand that there is comparatively a small aggregate now in the country over and above what will be necessary for home consumption The movement of the crop of 1874 began under a somewhat depressed condition of the money market and not until the second month of the calendar year began did our local finances materially improve Since that time the market has been pretty liberally supplied with funds available as loans and the demand having been somewhat slack the beginning of another harvest year will find dealers and others better prepared financially to enter upon its business than they were either last year or its The condition in monetary affairs, together with prospects of abundant crops an increased yield of the mines of the coast together with the probabilities in favor of an active demand for our surplus products at remunerative prices lead business men generally to hope for an active and at least moderately prosperous season in the various branches of production and trade. The outlook in Oregon is at any rate full as good as in any other part of the country and much more promising than in a great many other States of the Union

As one of the main sources of coin supply in the United States, the mines of this coast are prominent and they promise more this year than before for many years According to the report of the director of the U S Mint the Comstock lodes in Nevada notwithstanding the collapse of the overrated bonanza are giving out at a rate that promises $35 000 000 for this year and $50 000 000 for the next. The yield of the California and Consolidated Virginia mines alone will it is estimated be at the rate of $3 000 000 a month, as soon as the additional milling capacity now in course of erection is completed The Belcher Crown Point and Consolidated Virginia the three great mines of the Comstock lode have yielded during the forty eight months ending March 31 this year the sum of $56,283 479 and it is believed that the yield of the lode will increase the annual bullion product of the United States for this year to $85 0 0 000 and for the next year to $100 000 000

The shipments of specie to Europe during the first three months of this year were unusually large but are now falling off quite rapidly The payments made during May on account of European subscriptions to American loans was only £280 000 This says an exchange is an exceptionally small sum the payments made in May last year aggregating £1,[illegible] and the average monthly amount for the first four months of this year being £1,[illegible] One of the significances of this fact is that the amount we can draw this month against foreign negotiations is some $6 600 000 below the average monthly amount

Milwaukee warehouses, at the close of business on Saturday May 15th contained 1 371,372 bushels of wheat, 63 325 bushels of corn 100 288 bushels of oats 912 bushels of rye 13 709 bushels of barley and 18 0?8 bushels malt.

Below will be found the amount of grain in sight in the States and Canada, May 8 1875 Wheat 10 943 714 bushels corn 587,891 bushels oats 2 079 723 bushels rye 68 353 bushels barley 174 083 bushels

The exports from the leading seaboard ports during the week ending May 20th were 2 662 barrels of pork 3 124 429 pounds of lard 1 156 032 pounds of bacon 61 475 barrels of flour 198 705 bushels of wheat, 761,125 bushels of corn

The Crops of the Coast.

Harvest has begun in some parts of California but as yet no new grain has been put on the market, owing to the fact that there is at present but little inducement to sell prices being too low to admit of any haste in marketing The Commercial Herald estimates that California and Oregon combined will have a grain surplus for export of at least 600 000 tons this harvest The estimates of surplus in California vary from 300 000 to 400 000 tons of wheat Possibly they may export in the season of 1875–76 850 000 tons of Breadstuffs while Oregon can easily swell the same to 500 000 tons It is true that in some large grain growing valleys of California, the drought has ruined the crop entirely yet the increased breadth of land planted with good results as the sure return for thorough tillage of the soil goes far to make up for the ruin entailed upon all late planters and shiftless cultivators of the soil

In Oregon we hear of but very few field that do not promise an average and many of them are extra and the warm weather which we may reasonably expect very shortly will bring the crop on finely Oregon's surplus will fully come up to the Herald's estimate if it does not exceed it A half million tons of wheat in one year to export from these two comparatively young States shows the wonderful productiveness of the soil of our coast, and the energy and enterprise of our people and the figures assigned to Oregon are a source of congratulation to the agriculturists of our thrifty State.

Domestic Produce.

The market in produce is very quiet and no immediate prospect of a revival The immigration now coming into our State and that likely to come before another crop has been gathered has added to the estimates for home consumption and the fact is apparent that except breadstuffs there is comparatively a small amount of the products of the soil in our State above what will be needed to supply the home trade In wheat there is nothing satisfactory as to prices and the unsettled condition of the markets together with conflicting reports as to the condition of the crops have pretty effectually checked all operations at present Flour shipments are still heavy and prices unchanged Oats are a little scarcer and offers we are informed were made to day to purchase at 6 cents ℔ bushel Provisions show a weakening tendency and bacon is 1½ cent ℔ lower Eggs are firm at 16@17 cents ℔ dozen Wool is still very slow in coming forward the movement being doubtless retarded by the continuance of cool weather Nothing new as to price of wool has been developed so far this week
